Dear Dick,

Well I've finally settled down so I can write to you today. There is not enough running to be done just out the door in Utah in the wintertime; and it is such a project getting to the gym ---my blood pounds, my mind works, and my heart aches, yet only for a while for they are forever closing, or throwing out the runners for a tournament. And this is a practical concern of philosophy!

I'm for running a river in the Springtime (April) and this is a political proposal with practical credentials (so be it the farce of language and a mountain belay). A friend here has one of those super-duper catalogues and I will check out the inflatable kayaks, etc, and you do the same if you may. We may have a good preliminary list to work from in the 73 outings issue of the s. c. bulletin. How about Hell's Canyon of the Snake River, Idaho? That might mean going later in the year. When is your vacation? Maybe we should try a river in Arizona.

Now first I'll give you what I have of catalogues and hope to establish some terrain for our discussion.

AND what of the performing arts?
an examination to be conducted according to what criteria?

A Catalogue of Revelant Questions

work notes : questions seem to have a formative stance or developement

1) formative stance, preliminary-

I imbibed at independent study at p. 1. high the notion--I got the message: "The only thing that matters is the independent joy of learning (hunger for knowledge?) and here is a place where this will be true."*

*could this be reformulated in a group way or is it really a matter of individual affirmation, translation, or mistranslation?

some commentary

ously naive

nowadays this seems to me to be terrifically, marvel-

the question I want to know is

Is such an assertion practical?

2) What is the scope of such an assertion?

3) What is the activity of such an assertion?

4) What is the fraction, or the break, of its occurrence?

Dick, thanks for the copies of letters so far. I have still to locate a Xerox machine. i think this is about all that I have for tonight.

love,
Mike
